STATEMENT OF THE DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE BEFORE THE HOUSE ARMED SERVICES COMMITTEE -- 8 APRIL 1948

Before entering into a detailed section by section analysis of the bill before you (H.R. 5871), a little general background might be of interest. On 22 January 1946, by Executive letter, the President of the United States established the Central Intelligence Group under the direction and control of the National Intelligence Authority. The Executive directive set forth the functions and the authority of the Group in some detail, and provided that the personnel of the Agency should be assigned to the Group from the personnel of the State, War and Navy Departments. The unworkable nature of this arrangement very quickly became apparent, for it was necessary for each of these departments to hire and place on its own roles for assignment to duty with CIG the
